DETAILED ACTION

Claim Objections

1. The numbering of claims is not in accordance with 37 CFR 1.126 which requires the original numbering of the claims to be preserved throughout the prosecution. When claims are canceled, the remaining claims must not be renumbered. When new claims are presented, they must be numbered consecutively beginning with the number next following the highest numbered claims previously presented (whether entered or not).

Misnumbered claims 6-12 have been renumbered 5-11.

2. Claims 9-11 are objected to because of the following informalities: “a user device” is repeatedly used in the claims. It is not clear whether or not a user device is the same or different device. Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

4. Claims 1-4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Dahlen (U.S. Patent No. 5,870,454).

Regarding claim 1, Dahlen teaches a method for providing a text message to a user in a communications system, the method comprising the steps of:

establishing communications with the communications system from a user device (column 3, lines 48-50);

selectively coupling to a speech-to-text server that converts speech to text (Fig. 1, 80);

the speech-to-text server converting speech from the user device to a text message (column 7, lines 10-12); and the speech-to-text server storing the text message (column 7, lines 32-34).

Regarding claim 2, Dahlen teaches the method further comprising the step of sending the text message to a user device (column 8, lines 30-33).

Regarding claims 3 and 4, see Fig. 2A.

5. Claims 5-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Williams et al. (U.S. Patent Application Publication No. 2004/0252679).

Regarding claim 5, Williams et al. teach a telecommunications network that provides speech-to-text processing, the telecommunications network comprising:

a network access device (Fig. 13, 1304) coupled to the telecommunications network (Fig. 13, 1300);

a voicemail system coupled to the telecommunications network to store audio messages (Fig. 13, 1305); and an application processor coupled to the voicemail system to receive voicemail messages and convert the voicemail messages to text (Fig. 14, 1403).

Regarding claim 6, Williams et al. further teach the network wherein the text is sent to a destination over a packet-based network (Fig. 14, 1403).

Regarding claim 7, Williams et al. further teach the network wherein the text is sent as one of a facsimile transmission, an email, and a Web page posting (Fig. 1).

Regarding claim 8, Williams et al. teach a method for receiving text messages in a telecommunications network, the method comprising the steps of:

receiving an incoming call (Fig. 14, 1401);

determining whether to receive voice or a text message in response to the incoming (it is inherent that the system would know what kind of incoming call is);

receiving a voice message from a user device coupled to the telecommunications network (Fig. 12, 1201);

converting the voice message to a text message corresponding to the voice message (Fig. 14, 1403); and sending the text message to a user device (Fig. 14, 1403).

Regarding claims 9-11, see Fig. 15.

Conclusion

6. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Penzias (U.S. Patent No. 5,475,738) teaches an interface between text and voice messaging systems. Hyde-Thomson (U.S. Patent No. 5,557,659) teaches an electronic mail system having integrated voice messages. Irribarren (U.S. Patent No. 5,737,395) teaches a system and method for integrating voice, facsimile and electronic mail data through a personal computer. Picard et al. (U.S. Patent No. 6,233,318) teach a system for accessing multimedia mailboxes and messages over the internet and via telephone. Owens et al. (U.S. Patent No. 6,633,630) teach a system for integrated electronic communications.
